POOR POLICY.

Announcement was made yesterday that a meeting of the volunteer fire department would be held last night. As a result of this announcement two members were in attendance to hold an election of officers and figure on ways and means for the perpetuation of the organization. Fine support that for a city the size of Tonopah on behalf of those men who have heretofore been ready and willing to turn out at any hour of the day or night and give the best that was in them toward the saving of life and property. From all indications it is more than probable that the organization will disband. Should this prove the case the merchants have none to blame but themselves. They have been afforded every opportunity of lending support, moral and financial, to this most valuable enterprise and they have miserably failed. Should a bad fire break out shortly after the volunteer department ceases to exist those affected will feel personally aggrieved but they alone will be to blame.

It would be a good idea for the business interests of Tonopah to call a mass meeting and see what can be accomplished toward the relief of these conditions. The city badly needs the Volunteer Fire department, and the department, if it is to live, needs all the help that the Tonopah citizens can give it. At once is the time to take hold of this matter and save the day for the boys who save the property and lives in time of conflagration.

LONDON AND RENO.

Under the caption "Fools and Their Money" the Reno Gazette calls attention to the fact that Americans are expected to figure on spending $25,000,000 on the coronation of King George of England. Of course this expenditure of good American dollars in a foreign land is to be regretted but what of the vast sums that are to be spent in Reno by converts to the divorce colony during the coming summer, according to the statement of Senator Smith some few weeks ago? The same caption would be equally applicable to the $50,000 Europeans who, it is promised, will journey to Reno for succor from their marital woes—real or imaginary. The Gazette probably grieves that the many Americans who will be in London during the coronation are not making a "permanent" residence trip to Reno instead.

A HERO DEAD.

A greater hero far than all of the hundreds who lay down their life in battle was Dr. Edward F. Ashley, who martyred himself to the cause of good health for America. The doctor died as a result of his fight against cerebro spinal meningitis contracted from handling infected the work of keeping this dreaded disease away from Greek emigrants. The doctor was engaged in from the shores of this country. In all probabilities no magnificent marble shaft will mark the last resting place of Dr. Ashley, neither will his name emblazon the pages of history, but his life's work will constitute a much grander monument. He sacrificed his life for his fellow men.

THIRD PEACE CONGRESS.

The third national peace congress will be held this year at Baltimore, Md., May 3rd and 5th, under the auspices of the American Peace society. A most significant meeting in view of the fact of the mobilization of troops along the Mexican border and the recent hasty dispatch of others to the island possessions. However, the two former meetings of this organization, the first in New York in 1907, and the second in Chicago in 1909, called out a large and interested attendance from all over the country, and it is anticipated that the attendance this year will be larger than ever.

The printed proceedings of these congresses constitute important volumes of reference in the peace movement. According to the preliminary program, President Taft will open the congress and it will close with a banquet. The holding of the congress in Maryland, which is one of the southern states, will give opportunity, it is thought, to draw the south actively into the movement. Canada will likewise be organized into the congress as far as possible. These congresses deal with two lines of peace work, namely, (1) the awakening of the public conscience by addresses directed against the folly and the injustice which flow from war, together with the economic waste of universal armaments, and (2) the practical means of making war difficult by establishing institutions which will take away the excuse for war.

A SOCIALIST PREMIER.

Mr. Briand, who has been the head of the French cabinet since July 1909, has finally tired of the responsibilities of that office, and resigned. Previous to his appointment to the premiership he was actively engaged in speaking and writing against the state church of France, and he has got the credit for being responsible for the separation of church and state. He was a professed socialist, but when he became premier, some of his associates repudiated him because he was thought not radical enough for them.

Thus, M. Jaures, editor of the Humanite, criticised him severely for placing a general at the head of the war office, instead of an anti-militarist. And the German Vorwarts, a socialist organ, declared that he made socialism the cloak of ambition. Briand, lately, has openly combatted socialist schemes, as everyone in authority necessarily must do, when placed face to face with realities and not dealing with theories and dreams. Before his elevation he may have boasted, as rumor has it, that he would "drive Jesus Christ out of France," but in a high and responsible office he found that this was no easy problem, and when he was attacked for not enforcing the laws against the congregations for which he had the reputation of being responsible, he demed it best to resign.

Briand is not the only one who has found it impossible to apply in practice a set of pet theories, when in a position to do so. He is not the only one who, on that account has found himself the object of suspicion and mistrust. The truth is that many reformers are dealing in theories entirely impracticable under present circumstances. In theory—to offer only one illustration—the demand for the abolishment of armies and navies may be perfectly just and rational, but to precipitate sudden disarmament as long as there are powerful nations that still are actuated by the principle that might is right, would be folly. Every good citizen who understands the question at all will labor to bring about the sentiment and the conditions necessary to a government founded on law and courts instead of armies and navies, but until this shall have been brought about, the more imperfect conditions must be endured.

The same may be said of many of the propositions of socialism. They may be good and perfectly well suited to an ideal state, but until that comes they are impossible. M. Briand, we presume, has found this out. He enjoyed the distinction of being the first socialist premier of the French republic, and the only one in Europe, but he was not able to hold the place very long, nor to effect any radical reforms for the better, while in office.

Swimming is to be taught in the Chicago public schools, which will be provided with pools for the purpose. But can they compete with "the old swimmin' hole," and what recollections will they impress to take the place of the "swimmin' hole" memories?

Neither government forces nor insurgents will be helped by killing prisoners or the wounded. Such brutality earns the loathing of mankind, and puts the offender under the ban as an enemy of the human race.

Inasmuch as "Buffalo Bill" is an open candidate for the United States senate from Arizona, the question occurs whether or not this had anything to do with President Taft's failure to approve Arizona's proposed state constitution.

Perhaps some day we shall all know what these sensational orders mean that keep our military forces on the constant jump and that startle the country. But so far there is no key to the mystery that gives even a plausible explanation.

Residents along the Arroyo Seco are planning to import nightingales, to be liberated in the arroyo. Why not import a few crowing Los Angeles roosters, which disturb the slumbers of those averse to early rising?

The passion of English noblemen for easy American dollars is only equalled by their abhorrence of work. When they can't capture an heiress they are satisfied with a chorus girl.

It is reported that there is a plot on foot to restore Manuel to the throne of Portugal. The ex-king should hasten to thwart the scheme before the worst happens.

Mary Garden has rallied to the defense of the harem skirt, but that doesn't mean that Mary has suddenly become extravagant in the matter of her own apparel.

When a grim battler like Jacob Riis side-steps the suffrage question it is time for the average citizen to hunt for cover and do it mighty quick.

Messrs. Aldrich and Hale are not altogether out of it. They purpose to stick around Washington in an advisory capacity to the standpatters.

The young woman who faced guns as she rode into Mexican territory also was as brave when she faced numerous cameras during the trip.

It seems that the troubles in the interior department are not entirely allayed. The new secretary is addicted to the golf habit.

This war game can be played without the aid of autos or airships, but 'tis a total failure without the old, reliable army mule!

Elinor Glyn complains that the world misunderstands her. Wrong again, Elinor! The trouble is that you misunderstand the world.

Maxim has invented a new explosive for Uncle Sam far more deadly than anything now used in warfare. Coo, pretty peace, coo!

PERSONAL MENTION

H. L. Steely of New York is a Mizpah guest.

Agnes Dodd of San Francisco is a Tonopah visitor.

William Ashburn of Blair is in Tonopah.

F. T. Lidyard of Reno is registered at the Mizpah.

Charles Marcus of Millers spent the day in Tonopah.

A. L. Farrar of San Francisco is a guest at the Mizpah.

Thomas D. Rogers of Manhattan is a Tonopah visitor today.

A. J. Brunoni of San Francisco is among the recent arrivals at the Mizpah.

Assemblyman Joseph Piercy and wife were passengers on the incoming train today.

Joseph Morris and daughter, Launita arrived from San Francisco on the afternoon train today.

Jack Skuse returned to Tonopah yesterday from a long prospecting trip in the hills. He will probably leave again today for the scene of his activities.

Charles Treloar, who was injured in the cage at the West End mine and who afterwards suffered from two attacks of pneumonia, will leave for Oakland in the morning. While Mr. Treloar has entirely recovered from his illness, his constitution has not regained its old-time vigor, and medical advice is that he make the change.

ATTELL AND COULON WILL FIGHT SHORTLY

NEW ORLEANS, March 23.—Manager Tortorich of the West Side

Athletic club announced yesterday that negotiations for the fight between Attell and Johnny Coulon for the bantam weight championship are practically abandoned. Coulon has flatly refused to concede another pound to the featherweight champion, and Attell wired he would not agree to make less than 118 ring-side.

ATTENTION, LADIES!

Every lady in Tonopah is requested to call at the Bonanza office and investigate the new "wringless" mop, the greatest boon to the modern housewife. The agent for this most useful household article has a limited supply on exhibition at this office and would suggest that no time be lost in investigating. This article is one of the most popular of recent inventions, one that no woman can afford to be without.

OLDEST WHITE RESIDENT IN MISSOURI IS DEAD

SEDALIA, Mo., March 23.—Dan Bartlett, reputed to be the oldest white man in Missouri, died at his home here yesterday at the age of 110 years. He was born in Booneville, Mo.

Bartlett was born shortly after the inauguration of Thomas Jefferson as president. He remembered the trial of Aaron Burr in 1807. Bartlett was temperate in habits. He used neither tobacco nor intoxicating liquor. Five children, four grand children and two great-grand children survive.

The next excitement for San Francisco will be the appointment of a director general for that 1915 circus. That Kilkenny cat trouble will be a picnic in comparison.

The above statement is absolutely correct. The housewife can use this mop on either ceiling, wall or floor. To wring the cloth simply turn a little crank, the cloth is almost instantly dried without straining and wetting the hands as in the old-fashioned way.
